

The CLARETINE

News Bulletin of St. Claret College, Bangalore; Vol. VII, No. 3, February 2016

Fr. Principal's Message

Institutions of Higher Learning are not just places where knowledge acquisition happens, but these also need to be centres that promote critical thinking and holistic learning. A person who is only interested in acquiring knowledge and skills will be limited to one's own area of learning and wouldn't be able to contribute much to the society. But a person who cultivates critical thinking would continuously seek to find answers to the issues one faces through probing and searching for those answers. Along with this a holistic learning environment enables the seeker to acquire relevant skills and be sensitive to the environment comprising of people, life and nature. Today's higher education centres need to be centres that allow free and critical thinking, and promote holistic learning. Certain instances in the recent times in our country give an impression in the opposite direction. St. Claret College strives to promote holistic education and learning through different activities that we promote here. Our students have been very active in curricular, co-curricular and extra-curricular activities this semester. We had national seminars; overall cultural championships at two college fests; Mayurika, the intercollegiate cultural fest, Sports Meet, and Recipro, the fest that amalgamates cultural diversities and promote social commitments. Along with these we had seminars, industrial visits, and guest lectures. Our students have won many accolades in different competitions and two of our students won University Ranks. We believe the steps we take are in the right direction in imparting holistic education to the Claretines that make them to acquire knowledge and skills, allow them to think critically and promote an environment of holistic learning.
