A superstition is a belief people hold which is not based on reason. There is no logic to superstitions. People, who are superstitious, believe that they can either bring themselves good luck or avoid bad luck by acting in certain ways. When some people spill salt, immediately take some of it and throw it over their left shoulder. In this way, they feel they will avoid bad luck.

In ancient times, people in Rome, Greece and Scandinavia believed, that gods controlled their lives and all of nature. They tried to keep their gods happy by giving them gifts. When there were natural disasters, people thought that the gods were angry with them, so they tried to make the gods happy again. This is how we got the idea that we could affect our fate by certain actions.

In ancient times, people thought that their gods lived on the tops of mountains. They therefore believed that anything above them was nearer to their gods. Naturally, they thought that birds were messengers from the gods.

In some parts of the United States, people still believe that if they hear an owl in the early evening, it means death. Another link with these past beliefs is an English expression. When someone knows a secret about another person, he or she might say, "A little bird told me about it".

We know, of course, that birds can't talk and that owls don't really mean death, yet we still have these superstitions. Many sailors believe that if they see an albatross, it will bring bad luck to their ship. North Americans think of the eagle as a symbol of freedom, and some people still hold that dreaming of a bird means that they are seeing the loss of a soul.
