- Juno was the name of the beautiful woman, the queen of the Gods. Her favorite bird was a Peacock, who, with his stately air and lovely plumage, was fit to be the companion of so glorious a lady. The peacock, however, thought himself very badly treated, because he had not been given a voice as fine as the nightingale's to match his fine looks. He earnestly begged Juno to give him the voice of a nightingale but the goddess answered his prayer by saying. "Every bird has been given the gift that is most fitting for it; the nightingale is a plain bird, though its voice is so beautiful; whilst your tones are shrill and unpleasant, yet your plumage is the envy of all. Be thankful for what you have, O Peacock, instead of longing for that which you cannot have. And so learn to be content with your lot".
